Controversy follows Parker into business world

Ex-mayor busy building water slides, TV stations but finds stormy times

By JEFF WEATHERSBY
and JODY ROBERTS
The News Tribune

When a feisty and aggressive Tacoma mayor left office four years ago, even his harshest critics on the City Council had one compliment to pay the man they sparred with so often.

Mike Parker, they said, was one heck of an idea man.

Some of his ideas — such as bringing a world's fair to Tacoma — were openly scorned. Others were blocked by cynicism or inertia.

Now Parker is out on his own, and the ideas — and controversies — still churn.

This time there is no City Council to rein him in, although Steve Downing, vice president of Mike Parker & Associates, said he tries to keep the irremissible boss in touch with the practical.

The latest ideas of the independent politician-turned-entrepreneur involve a business empire that — by combining his brainstorming with the money of those willing to gamble with him — could range the West Coast:

- A huge waterslide from the top of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu, an idea later abandoned due to structural problems with the hotel.

- A proposed $20 million Seattle Center ice rink and water park.

- More than a half-dozen television stations in California, Alaska, Hawaii and Washington.

- Renovation of Tacoma's Carleton Hotel as a rescue mission-type refuge for the poor, with help from private investors and federal loans, which Downing said would be at no profit to Parker.

Those are only a few of Parker's inspirations.

The controversy that followed his political career as state legislator, mayor and aspirant for Congress and county executive has followed him into business.

"People like Mike an awful lot or they hate him," Downing commented.

In pursuit of wealth and success, Downing said his boss is relentless.

"I honestly to God don't think the man ever stops," he said. He can't remember when Parker, who was in Hawaii and Alaska last week, didn't turn every meal of the day into a business meeting.

Because of his business schedule, Parker was unable to meet with the News Tribune last week.

In addition to pursuing his businesses, Parker has managed to pay off large political debts and almost $200,000 in back taxes to the Internal Revenue Service, said Downing, who is also one of Parker's attorneys. Downing said he did not know why Parker owed the IRS so much money.

But while Parker recently estimated in court records that he earned an average of more than $100,000 a year in the past three years, Downing conceded things are financially tight at Mike Parker & Associates.

Parker's pursuit of his dreams have also carried a personal price tag, Downing said, including family problems. Parker now sleeps in a loft in his Ruston Way office.

"Mike could very well be a wealthy man five to 10 years from now, if everything works out," Downing said. "But Mike is not a wealthy man (today)."

Meanwhile, it is matters of money that trigger many of the clashes between Parker and his critics, and some of the lawsuits and other litigation dogging Parker as he works to set up his interstate business empire.

One apparent problem has been to convince state and federal agencies that his projects have adequate financial backing.

In 1980, one Parker-promoted television company filed documents indicating an employee of convicted racketeer Robert Satiacum would arrange $3 million in loans to purchase television equipment for the San Francisco station. The employee, Samuel Irving, subsequently disappeared in California while apparently attempting to obtain funds from mysterious sources.

On another occasion, a loan officer with a now-defunct Federal Way mortgage company offered $1.5 million to fund an Anchorage TV station, claiming to be vice president of the firm. When the president found out, the loan officer was fired and the president acknowledged the company did not have the money to meet the commitment.

Downing said that in both cases Parker did not know the offers were questionable.

Then the state racing commission rejected Parker's plans to build a winter Thoroughbred track in Sumner. The commission ruled investors showed no sign of having $40 million to build the track, which some critics claim to be as mythical as the half-horse, half-man creature for which Parker has named one of his myriad companies.

Centaur Enterprises Inc. has sued state officials, claiming a Republican conspiracy doomed the project. A rival track in Auburn was approved without similarly stringent financial requirements.

One of his sharpest critics, however, is attorney Ralph Smith, a Democrat and former chief administrator of the state Securities Division.

Smith recently charged in court documents that Centaur was set up as a conduit for investors' money to Parker, via fees for consulting and other services provided by Parker's company.

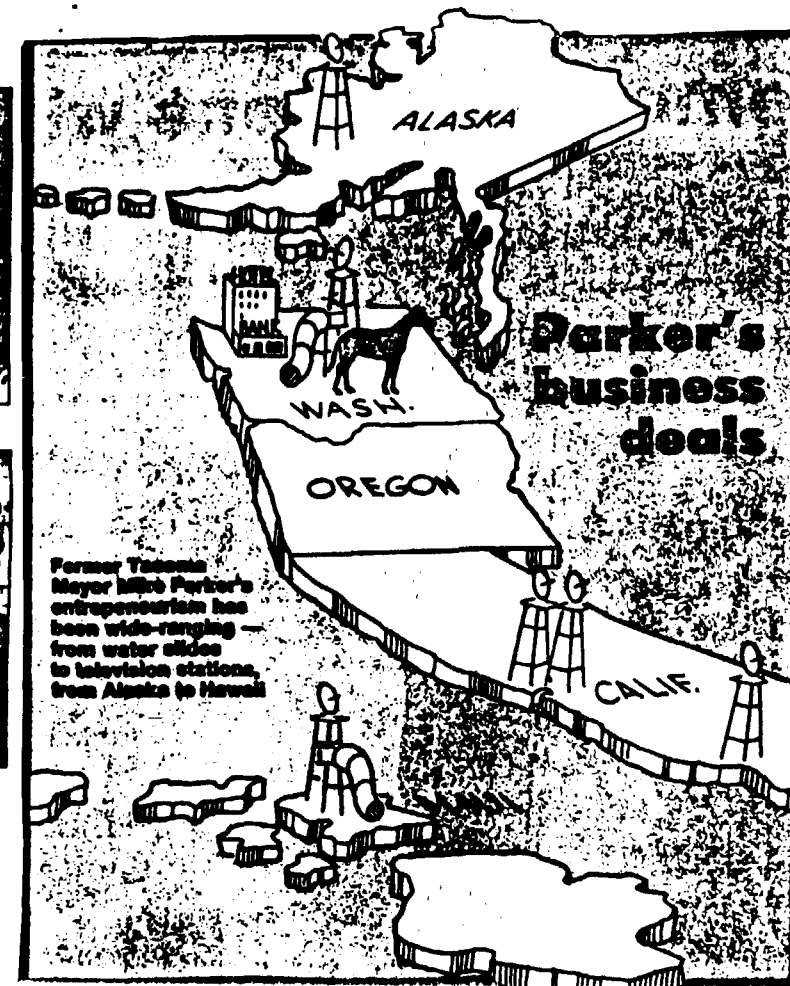

While Parker owns nearly a third of Centaur, as promoter he paid only 50 cents a share for his interest, state security records showed. Other investors paid $100 a share, until several hundred thousand dollars was raised.

Mike Parker

Steve Downing

"Of the money to be raised (from investors), the lion's share was scheduled to flow directly back into the pockets of Michael Parker and his associates," Smith claimed in the court papers.

"All in all, Michael Parker and his associates stood to gain regardless of the outcome. A couple of hundred thousand dollars if they failed and possibly millions (if) they could get a license to peddle around the country."

There is little love lost between the businessman and the former state securities official.

"Smith thinks Mike is a crook," Downing conceded, but he also called Smith "incredibly obstinate" and biased because the attorney now represents a business rival of Parker.

What Smith doesn't understand about the Parker operations is that, at the beginning, a lot of money will be spent in consulting and management fees paid to Parker, Downing said.

He speculated that Parker charges less than other promoters might.

Setting up a risky new venture is a lot more intense and time-consuming than operating an enterprise once it is firmly established, he said.

Parker's normal fee for organizing and managing a project is about $60,000, Downing said, plus the costs of support services — the lawyers, secretaries and bookkeepers his firm provides.

It is a high-risk business, especially in television, as became clear in Parker's trouble-plagued efforts to bring Anchorage its first non-network station.

Totem Broadcasting, created by Parker, is about to be sold to avoid bankruptcy. "Agravation was their profit," Downing said of the investors — including Parker — who will be lucky to get out with their original investment.

"Murphy's Law was the ruling principle at Totem Broadcasting," Downing said. Anything that could go wrong, soon did.

The fledgling station no sooner went on the air last December when crises hit, especially equipment failures. Less than half of Anchorage's viewers could even pick up KTVB-TV's weak signal on their sets, according to Downing.

Then, investors discovered there wasn't enough money to keep the station on the air.

A January audit by Touche Ross & Co. warned of deep debts, with only $1.6 million in assets to counter $3 million in debts. The station had only $200 in cash and had run up $34,000 in bank overdrafts, accountants said, and would need more money to survive.

Though accountants said it would only be a stop-gap measure, Totem decided to try to raise $500,000 from new investors. Downing was optimistic about their chances; appraisers said Totem could be worth as

But less than 30 days after KTVB-TV aired its first program, Republic Leasing of Olympia filed a $1 million lawsuit, charging that Totem was insolvent and demanding return of a half-million dollars worth of equipment that ran the station, and payment of overdue bills.

Investors abandoned hopes of convincing others to invest more money into Totem, and put the station up for sale. If a sale closes next month as planned, East Coast investor Sharrad Tak will take over 60 percent of the station, and Parker and fellow Totem investors will split what remains.

It was a stormy time for Parker. By a slim margin, investors voted to keep him on as the managing agent of the station. Downing said there was a split between those investors who kept faith in Parker, and those siding with another major investor critical of Parker.

Downing contends many of Totem's troubles were caused by fellow investor Roy Mayhugh, whom he accuses of buying defective equipment for the station. Mayhugh refused to discuss the issues with The News Tribune, citing possible litigation.

Though half of the $300,000 Totem had hoped to raise to save itself would have gone to Parker,

Downing said most was to repay Parker for loans he made to the struggling company, and KOLs he had accepted as paychecks.

"He stopped that station from going under many, many times," Downing said.

A prospectus issued during the attempt to raise the $500,000 said Parker's company would receive a management fee of $10,000 a month plus up to another $5,000 a month in expenses.

Bankruptcy could have jeopardized not only the personal finances of the Totem investors, but also a $200,000 federal Small Business Administration guaranteed loan from Seattle-First National Bank.

The SBA has twice guaranteed loans for Parker-promoted companies even though his long-time political and business associate, Randy Gordon, was a part owner in both projects. Gordon has a personal fortune of $1.5 million and receives periodic payments from a substantial family trust, according to Downing.

While Tom Powers, general counsel to the U.S. House of Representatives' Small Business Committee, said the SBA was set up to help provide loans to people who could not get them elsewhere, Downing said Gordon's money was not available because it is tied up in various holdings.

Another SBA spokesman said that while it is probably rare for wealthy investors to qualify for a guaranteed loan, it is not unheard of, if the investor's assets are tied up in other deals.

Meanwhile, as the Anchorage station struggled for existence, Parker set to work on other projects.

KQFB-TV in Tacoma went on the air April 1 with the first fundamentalist Christian television channel in the Northwest. Parker owns part of the station, although Downing said he stepped down from a directorship to avoid the clashes that have since occurred among rival church factions in the company.

The station features sermons by such preachers as Jimmy Swaggart, Christian soap operas and religious quiz shows, and has generated controversy by claims that several injured or crippled people have regained their health through the help of KQFB viewing or prayer.

"There's no doubt about it," Family Broadcasting president Paul Gray told reporters recently. "We don't believe we have miraculous healing power; the power belongs to God. We're only doing what we're asked to do in the Bible — to pray for the sick that they be healed."

Yet to go on the air are stations in Anacortes and Homestead, and a San Francisco station expected to pass FCC approval.

Parker either owns or once owned shares in those stations. He is also managing applications for television stations in San Bernardino and Novato, Calif., and Bellevue.

After the Totem experience, Downing said he is trying to convince Parker to become less involved in day-to-day management of an established station and instead concentrate on what he does best: thinking up new ideas, and finding people who want to share in them.

That means that often Parker himself creates the demand for his services as a promotion-investment consultant by coming up with an idea and convincing others to hire him, then creating his own cowboys, Downing said.

Except for minor exceptions, the attorney said the only companies seeking Parker's expertise were those Parker had had a role in forming and promoting.

"But," Downing added, "I guess that's what you call entrepreneurship."

TV station begun by ex-mayor in trouble

Bankruptcy action sought by creditors

By JEFF WEATHERSBY
The News Tribune

An Alaska television station started by former Tacoma Mayor Mike Parker is the subject of an involuntary bankruptcy action filed by three of its creditors in federal court in Anchorage.

Totem Broadcasting is the second firm in which the former mayor has been a major figure to find itself in bankruptcy court. Parker is president of Thunderfalls, a South Tacoma waterslide that filed voluntarily for protection under federal bankruptcy laws in June.

Parker's present position in Totem is unclear, although in the past he had been identified in a Totem press release as "the man behind the scenes at . . . KTTY Channel 4." Neither Parker nor his local attorney, Neil Hoff, could be reached for comment.

There have been several attempts to sell Totem but it could not be determined Friday if any had been consummated.

Creditors seeking to bring Totem into bankruptcy court are the accounting firm of Touche Ross & Co.; Ditchfield & Associates Inc., a television consulting firm; and Harry Pennington & Associates, Inc., an insurance company.

The bankruptcy documents say Totem owes Touche Ross $25,143, Ditchfield, $30,000, and Pennington, $14,554.

The creditors claim all of Totem's assets were sold in March and while some creditors were paid, others were not. The trio of creditors seeking Totem's bankruptcy under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy law also claim there is nothing left in the firm from which payment could be obtained.

William Artus, Anchorage attorney who filed the bankruptcy petition for the creditors, could not be reached for comment.

Richard Levenson, a Tacoma attorney with an active bankruptcy practice, explained Chapter 7 be reached for comment.

Richard Levenson, a Tacoma attorney with an active bankruptcy practice, explained Chapter 7 of the bankruptcy code is often used by a group of creditors to force a debtor into court to ensure an orderly distribution of assets. Other provisions of the code allow for voluntary bankruptcy to protect a company from creditors while it reorganizes, he said.

Parker and Steve Downing, a former vice president of Mike Parker & Associates, have said in the past that Totem has been in financial trouble for some time.

A Touche Ross audit more than a year ago found Totem had $1.6 million in assets and $2 million in debts. Additionally, it had $200 in its checking account and $54,000 in bank overdrafts.

A year ago, Downing said "Murphy's Law was the ruling principle at Totem Broadcasting." He meant that if something could go wrong, it would.

Parker recently blamed a former business associate for the loss of some $500,000 at Totem, claiming the associate built a station that did not work. The former associate has filed a lawsuit against Parker, claiming Parker swindled him out of $350,000.

After leaving the mayor's office in 1982, Parker became involved in promoting a variety of businesses, ranging from television stations to a horse racing track. Parker recently acknowledged he was in severe financial trouble, but said he thought he could pull out of it.

(KZIA TV, Channel 48, Las Cruces, New Mexico) to Two If By Sea Broadcasting Corp (FCC File No. BALCT920405KJ) was dismissed without prejudice effective July 2, 1992, pursuant to request by Southwestern Broadcasting Co., Inc.

Micheal L. Parker was an Executive Vice President and Director of West Coast United Broadcasting Co., Channel 38 at San Francisco, California which has an application pending before the Federal Communications Commission for a new low power television on Channel 66 at San Francisco, California. Filed December 8, 1989. FCC File No. BLCT-890926KE.

Micheal L. Parker held jointly with his wife, Judith Parker, a stock interest in Pacific Rim Broadcasting Co., which was an applicant for a construction permit to modify its construction permit for KPRR-TV, Channel 14, Honolulu, Hawaii, to operate on Channel 5, FCC File No. BMPCT-830223KO, MM Docket No. 83-734. The application was dismissed by the Commission with prejudice effective March 12, 1984 pursuant to request by Pacific Rim Broadcasting Co. See Memorandum Opinion and Order, FCC 84M-1202, released March 12, 1984.

An application of Micheal Parker for a new commercial television station on Channel 29 at Sacramento, California, FCC File No. BPCT-820824KJ, MM Docket No. 83-66, was dismissed with prejudice effective May 17, 1983 pursuant to request by Mr. Parker. See Memorandum Opinion and Order, FCC 83M-1594, released May 17, 1983.

In addition, Micheal Parker was an officer, director and shareholder of Mt. Baker Broadcasting Co., which was denied an application for extension of time of its construction permit for KORC(TV), Anacortes, Washington, FCC File No. BMPCT-860701KP. See Memorandum Opinion and Order, FCC 88-234, released August 5, 1988.

Although neither an applicant nor the holder of an interest in the applicant to the proceeding, Micheal Parker's role as a paid independent consultant to San Bernardino Broadcasting Limited Partnership ("SBB"), an applicant in MM Docket No. 83-911 for authority to construct a new commercial television station on Channel 30 in San Bernardino, CA, was such that the general partner in SBB was held not to be the real party in interest to that applicant and that, instead, for purposes of the comparative analysis of SBB's integration and diversification credit, Mr. Parker was deemed such. See Religious Broadcasting Network et. al., FCC 88R-38 released July 5, 1988. MM Docket No. 83-911 was settled in 1990 and Mr. Parker did not receive an interest of any kind in the applicant awarded the construction permit therein, Sandino Telecasters, Inc. See Religious Broadcasting Network et. al., FCC 90R-101 released October 31, 1990.
